HITLER'S FIGUREHEAD

Army's Rule Said To Extend Over Most of Home and Foreign Fronts.

(By Associated Press)
MADRID—Press dispatches reaching Spain from Berlin yesterday said "powers of great magnitude" had been given to Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering following a meeting of Nazi party chiefs and army leaders.

News of the meeting at Adolf Hitler's headquarters, announced by Berlin over the week-end, lent color to various reports current in Spain that the army is taking over conduct of German affairs in preparation for a long defensive war.

Although, these reports say,
Adolf Hitler remains as a figurehead leader, the real rulers of Germany are Goering, Field Marshal General Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the high command, and Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, commander in chief of the navy.

German reports reaching Spain indicate the German army consider it necessary to retain the Nazi party as a facade behind which it can operate without causing an upheaval within the country.

This view, it was said, was prompted by recent disorders in Italy, which jettisoned the Fascist party when the military dictatorship of Marshal Pietro Badoglio took over. German leaders are reported to believe that if Italy withdraws from the war it will be the result of administrative chaos as much as a public clamor for peace.

It was understood that Goering was chosen as the Nazi represen-

SALVAGING PRAISED

Work Expected to Cost More

NEW YORK — While a great array of spectators looked on from the banks of the Hudson river, the former French liner Normandie, now the U.S.S. Lafayette, was today being slowly and cautiously raised toward an upright position.

It seemed only a matter of hours before the ship will be reclaimed from her grave of river mud where she has lain partly submerged on her port side since she was swept by five eighteen months ago.

It is one of the most remarkable jobs in maritime history.
Capt. Bernard E. Manseau, supervisor of salvage for the United States navy, said that when the capsized liner is raised to an angle of 45 degrees—expected today—she will be towed free of the slip at Pier 88 and brought to an almost even-keel in deep water.

Captain Manseau said that barring unforeseen incidents, it is only a question of weeks before lifting the ship for sea duty will get under way.

"There is no doubt that our 18 months of work and the millions that went into the job were well spent," he declared.
"The Lafayette will float again."
The colorful crowd that witnessed the salvage operations included many army, navy and marine officers and their wives. They lined the rail of the 400-foot observational platform overlooking the ship.

It blocks along the river front on the Manhattan side thousands of civilian spectators, many on roof tops, sought to catch a view of the rising mastodon. On the

Americans Land Behind Foe, Cut Reinforcements

Daring Operation Called Extremely Successful As Other Yanks Make
Junction With British; 300
More Axis Prisoners.

(By International News Service)
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRI-CA—In one of the most daring operations of the Sicilian campaign, shock troops of the United States Seventh army landed behind the enemy lines on the north coast of Sicily today, while other American forces moving eastward from Troina made a junction with the British Eighth army.

The new landing was disclosed in a communique from the headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Three hundred Axis prisoners were taken when the Yanks spilled out of landing craft on the northern beaches and streamed to the west, driving back enemy reinforcements.

(Editor's Note: The military correspondent of the British Press Association reported the seaborne landing was protected by American destroyers and was "extremely successful.")

Gen. Eisenhower's communique gave few details of the new operation except to say it was unopposed at the outset. The Algiers radio, however, described the landing as "one of the most daring operations of the Sicilian campaign" and added:

"The landing must have been made at dawn. It was made necessary by the fact that parts of the northern coastal road had been completely destroyed by the retreating enemy."

(Editor's note: An NBC broadcast from Algiers said the size of the landing force was not announced. "It is known only that a number of boats were used," this broadcast said.)

The freshly-landed troops joined up immediately with other Seventh army units moving on toward Randazzo, the main road and communications center north of Mt. Etna.

The Anglo-American junction was effected in the general vicinity of captured Bronte and Adriano.

On the north coast, other American troops seized the port of Santa Agata, 13 miles east of San Stefano, and the long-besieged inland stronghold of San Fratello.
The Yanks then pushed south in a drive aimed at joining with the newly-landed troops.

Reuters reported from Allied headquarters in North Africa that the two forces succeeded in forming a junction.)

POCKETED: Nazi Escape Path Cut By Reds West Of Kharkov

MOSCOW—(U.P.)—Russian columns converging on semi-encircled Kharkov brought it within range of their heavy guns today and military sources said the fall of the great German defense bastion was inevitable and perhaps imminent.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—The Red army, still crashing westward under the momentum of its successful Belgorod push, sealed off another avenue of escape for retreating German troops when it captured the railway town of Bogodukhov, 35 miles west and slightly north of Kharkov, the Russians disclosed today.

The city's fall cuts the second of two railroad links with Bryansk, which also was threatened by Soviet columns advancing from Orel, and left Kharkov pocketed on three sides, a communique broadcast from Moscow indicated. Bry-ansk is 250 miles northwest of Kharkov.

The Russians also announced capture of Dolzhik, which brought the Red army to within 16 miles of Kharkov on the northwest.

Bogodukhov and Dolzhik were the most important of the 60 populated places which the Russians reported they had swept into their bag in the day's fighting. All were located north and west of Kharkov. There was no further mention of activity by the Red army troops concentration in the Chuguyev sector to the southeast of Kharkov, which would be the most likely starting point of a companion column in a pincer move.

The German retreat apparently was being carried out with a loss of men and material comparable to that suffered by the Nazis in the earlier stages of the Russian offensive. The communique said that the Germans lost

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC—Gen. Douglas MacArthur said today Japan had used her fullest resource of concentrated attack on the Pacific fronts, "has failed, and is now on a defensive."

"The margin was close but it was conclusive," the commander-in-chief of all Allied forces in the south and southwest Pacific said in a statement expressing supreme confidence in final victory.

"Although for many reasons our victories may have lacked in glamorous focus, they have been decisive of the final result in the Pacific," he said. "I make no predictions as to time or detail, but Japan, on the Pacific fronts, has exhausted the fullest resource of concentrated attack of which she was capable, has failed, and is now on a defensive which will yield just in proportion as we gather force and definition. When that will be I do not know, but it is certain."

The statement that Allied victories "have been decisive of the final result" gained added significance from the words of General MacArthur's spokesman, who said he would interpret it as meaning that "the final outcome of the war in the Pacific now is clear."

Commenting informally on the war's progress in his sphere of command, General MacArthur
said:

'Borrowed' Pass Can't Keep Soldier Out Of Law's Clutch

An attempt by an army deserter to conceal his identity by "borrowing" a pass and identification cards from another soldier was frustrated yesterday by Mansfield police who arrested Pvt. Charles Klinedinst of Camp Shenango, Pa., for the second time in two weeks.

Questioned by detectives after he was taken into custody at 202 South Main street Sunday afternoon, Klinedinst denied he was the same man arrested here late in July until officers told him they had his complete army record on file.

The soldier then confessed he had "borrowed" the pass and an automobile from a camp mate to drive back to Mansfield to see his wife whom he married earlier in the summer. She is working at a Mansfield war plant, officers said.

Klinedinst was held in the city jail for 10 days before he was returned to the Pennsylvania camp last week. He said he was restricted to his quarters as punishment for being absent without leave for more than two months, but managed to slip away from camp for the week-end to visit his wife.

You don't have to wait until after the war

ALL OVER AMERICA people today are asking questions. They are wondering about the kind of products they will be able to buy after the war.

What will the new automobiles be like? Will synthetic tires really outlast our cars? What new miracles can we look for in radio, television, home refrigeration and air conditioning?

But you don't have to wait until the war is over to enjoy perfection in one of the good things of life. Today, in Schlitz, you are truly drinking the beer of tomorrow.

Keeping a step ahead is traditional at Schlitz. Those well informed on brewing know that for nearly 100 years Schlitz has pioneered almost every major advancement in the American brewing art.

And most important of all, Schlitz now brings you just the kiss of the hops—all of the delicate flavor, none of the bitterness. That famous flavor found only in Schlitz tells you that you don't have to wait until after the war to enjoy your post-war beer. The beer of tomorrow is here today!

ROSE HUCK BECOMES BRIDE OF CPL. BISHOP

Many Friends and Relatives Witness Pretty Wedding Solemnized Saturday Morning At St. Peter's Church.

BEFORE the palm-banked, candlelit altar of the St. Peter's Catholic church, Miss Rose Stephanie Huck, daughter of Mrs. Nicholas Huck, 316 Wayne street, exchanged her nuptial vows with Cpl. Ralph Edward Bishop, Frederick field, U. S. A. A. F., Okla. The ceremony was read Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock by Msgr. R. C. Goebel. Wedding music was played by Sister Isabel and soloists were Thomas Rohen and James Risacher.

Bouquets of Piccadilly gladioli and asters gave color to the altar where John C. Huck gave his sister in marriage.

She wore a floor length gown of pure white sugar mist, made with a pinnafire top, round neckline; trimmed with rows of tucking on the bodice and the skirt. The full skirt fell into a short train. Only other trim to the wedding dress was the row of buttons down the long tight sleeves and down the back. On her head she wore a bonnet trimmed with two heart shaped pearl arrangements from which flowed a circular fingertip length veil, over virgin style.

She carried a shower bouquet of white gardenias and pink and white roses tied with white satin ribbon streamers.

Miss Eleanor L. Frasz, cousin of the bride, was her maid of honor. She wore a frock of Queen Anne blue marquisette, made with full skirt which was fastened to a long tight bodice. Chantilly lace, trimmed the edge of the sheer

Birthday Party Given Sunday

Mrs. Anna Maurer, 180 Grace street, entertained Sunday in honor of the ninth birthday anniversary of her granddaughter, Marion Schneider of Baltimore, Md. Little Marion and her brother, Charles, are visiting here for several weeks.

Games were the diversion after which refreshments were served on the lawn. A large birthday cake centered the table. The honoree received many gifts from her guests.

Those in attendance were Franklin Zuber, Phyllis Maurer, LaDonna Brandt, Bobby Brandt, Walter Maurer, Eddie Daklovic and Jeanne Jacob.

Eighteen members and one guest were present last week for the meeting of the Handy Helpers' 4-H club which was held at the home of their advisor, Joann Brook and Marilyn Swisher gave cooking demonstrations after the business meeting. Girls who will attend camp at Hidden Hollow are Ruth Brook, Eleanor Brook, Joann Brook, Jean Baith, Damaris Clark, Elaine Christiansen, Shirley Christiansen, Martha Ewing, Mary Jo Hunter, Norma Hoffman, LaDonna Metz, Dixie Scoles, Marilyn Swisher and Ruth Swisher. Club projects will be completed by the next meeting, Aug. 20.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers) By ADELE GARRISON

"Yes, you can bet Dad didn't overlook any bets," Dicky agreed. Then, with his hands still gripping my shoulders, he stooped and kissed me.

"Good luck!" he said. "Be sure to stay in full sight until after Olina has a chance to see you."

"I'll remember!" I assured him, and scurried away to the linen shelves on my floor, luckily but a few steps from Ruth Hayes' door. Taking out an armful of hand towels, bath towels and bath mats, I began to walk up and down the corridor, in order that I might be in camouflaging motion when Ruth Hayes and Olina should get out of the elevator.

Not Long to Wait. I did not have long to wait, and I told myself that it was a good thing, for I felt myself growing more uneasy by the second. When the elevator stopped at the seventh floor, I jumped up strength from some hidden reservoir within me, and went up close to it, so that Ruth and Olina would have to pass me on their way from the elevator to Room 1720.

I was able, also, to keep my hands from trembling, and my face composed, with my eyes cast down. But my old trick of peering from beneath my lowered eyelashes stood me in good stead, enabling me to see Olina, with her handsome bag in her hand, walking beside Ruth Hayes toward the door of 1720.

A slender but powerfully built man, carrying a suitcase also, alighted from the elevator, putting a casual query to the elevator attendant as he did so. "Which way is 1722?" he asked, and I paid a mental tribute to the attention to detail which is my father's. It was the natural question for a stranger to ask, but I saw Ruth Hayes' head go up, and knew that she would watch the man closely until he had reached the next room to her own. "Passes Ruth and Olina," the attendant said, pointing, and with a brief "Thank you," the man strode down the corridor, passing Ruth and Olina with a perfunctory "Sorry!" Going into 1722, he closed the door sharply behind him.

I went into a room across the hall, put down part of my load of linen, and then came out again. As I saw Ruth and Olina pause before the door of 1720, I whipped into the "Exit" doorway just across from 1722, secure in the belief that Ruth was paying no more attention to me than if I had been a piece of furniture.

The place was an ideal listening post I found, for the voices of both Ruth and Olina, though they spoke in low tones, were distinctly audible to me.

"We can't talk very well here," Ruth began in matter-of-fact tones. "Better come into my room until we get this business transacted."

"Oh I mustn't do that!" Olina protested in fluttering tones that did credit to her histrionic ability. "Why not?" demanded Ruth sharply.

Promised Her Mother. "Because I promised my mother long ago," Olina explained naively, "that I would never go into any strange room with anyone whom I did not know. It is bad enough for me to come down here without anybody at home knowing it, but with that appeal from Georges, I didn't have any choice. But I can't disobey her in anything else."

"You say nobody knows you came down here?" Ruth queried. "But don't you realize I am not what your mother would term a stranger?" Georges trusted me to see you and receive the contents of this bag from you, and I certainly am not going to have you open it out in this corridor. Don't be foolish, now! Come into my room with me!"

"No! No!" Olina insisted vehemently, and then her voice suddenly rose in a frantic cry of "Maid! Maid!"

SOCIETY & CLUBS

Leotta Hunter To Wed Aug. 14 at Women's Club

Miss Leotta Hunter, Ford apartments, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Hunter, 312 Glessner avenue, announced to friends Saturday her approaching marriage to William Carrier, son of Mrs. Fannie Carrier Highland avenue. The closed service will be solemnized Saturday at 11 o'clock at the Women's Club.

Hostesses for the announcement party were the bride-elect's sisters, Mrs. Bernard Park and Mrs. Everett Tingley. Eighteen were present at the Park home, 180 Taylor road. Out-of-town guests were Mrs. Glenn Zebold of Shelby, Mrs. Harold Painter of Lexington, Tenn., and Mrs. Charlotte Leahy of Nogales, Ariz.

Luncheon was served at noon at small tables daintily with bouquets of garden flowers. Guests learned of the coming nuptials when they opened their napkins on which were printed the names and date. Later bridge was the diversion with prizes won by Mrs. Harold Painter, Miss Virginia Stark and Mrs. George Fort.

The hostesses presented the bride-elect with a gift of crystal.

Family Picnic Held For Air Raid Wardens

Air Raid wardens of the Fourth ward and their families met for a picnic Sunday at Johns park with 125 in attendance. Ed Wylie was master of ceremonies and Ralph Peat was general chairman of arrangements. Musical selections were given by the Sunshine band.

During the social hour Mrs. Lester Bose gave accordion solos and Ray Lantz favored with piano numbers. Mary Jones tap danced. Contests were the diversion for adults and children with defense stamps as prizes.

Guests for the occasion were Mayor W. J. Locke, Glenn Marriott and Mrs. John Pierce.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay
"The Authority on Authorities"

HOW YOU SHOULD SCORE

Besides prescribing the number of points allowed for various developments during a game, the new Laws of Contract Bridge cover very clearly and thoroughly the conditions governing correct scoring, under the following regulations.

1. The number of tricks won by each side should be determined and agreed before the cards are mixed together. Points to be scored (as per the official scoring table) should be announced and recorded forthwith.

2. A scorer should announce all scores before recoding them. One or more players keep score. If but one side keeps score, both sides are equally responsible to see that the score for each hand is correctly entered. It is recommended that a score be kept for each side, and that a player desiring to consult the score look at the one his side is keeping.

3. At the end of the rubber, the trick and premium points of each side are added; the side with the larger total is deemed to have won the rubber, irrespective of the number of games (if any) which it has won; and the difference between the total represents the number of points won.

4. Irrespective of the number of players keeping score, or of the side which was responsible for the error, neither side has any redress for a call or play made relying on a score which is subject to correction as provided in the next section.

5. An error of omission in the score of a hand, either proven before the cards have been mixed together, or subsequently admitted by both sides, may be corrected at any time before the rubber score is agreed; except that, after the first call is made in the next hand, an agreed trick score may never be corrected if its correction would change the trick score of the current game in any way, or would deprive a side of a game or allot one to it. (This does not prevent a correc-

Martha Shiplet To Give Recital Here Tonight

Miss Martha Shiplet, young pianist and pupil of Miss Thelma Reed, will present a recital tonight at 8 o'clock at the Women's Club, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Mary Anglin, contralto.

Opening numbers on the program will be "Sonatina in F Major" by Beethoven, "The Skylark" by Tchaikowski, and "Adieu to the Piano" by Beethoven, played by Miss Shiplet. Mrs. Anglin will then sing "My Task" by Ashford, "Just For Today" by Ambrose, and "Gloria" by A. Buzzie-Pecchia, accompanied by her daughter.

The third group of selections will be composed of "Intermezzo Scene" by Kettleby and "Twinkletoes" by Eckstein, played by the young pianist. Mrs. Anglin's next offering will consist of "A Song of India" by Remsky-Korsakoff, "Ave Maria" by Schubert, and "Clavellitos" by Valverde, accompanied by Miss Reed.

Miss Shiplet will bring the program to a close with "Scarf Dance" by Chaminade, "May Night" by Palmgren, "Melody" by Dawes, and "Minuet in G" by Paderewski.

Formal Dinner Party Honors Virginia Horst

Miss Virginia Horst, who with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Horst, 28 Bartley avenue, is leaving soon to make her home in Louisville Ky., was honored Saturday evening with a formal farewell dinner party given by Miss Jeanne Worley, 244 Walter avenue. Guests were seated at a long table which was decorated with appointments in pink and green.

Individual corsages were the favors for each guest. Later the honoree was surprised with a shower of miscellaneous gifts. The evening was spent socially.

Guests in attendance were Misses Felicia Burket, Mary Benninghoff, Irene Dyars, Jacqueline Augustine, Lydia Velzy, Phemil Wright and Elaine Guider. Miss Helen Rorick of Bucyrus was the out-of-town guest present. She is a classmate of Miss Worley's at Wittenberg college.

Farewell Party Honors Mrs. Rudd

Mrs. Jean Rudd, who leaves today for Dayton to make her future home, was honored last week at a party given by Mrs. Hilda Schieber, South Diamond street road. The 24 guests in attendance were from the radio receiving department, the navy inspection and signal corps departments of the Westinghouse Electrical and Manufacturing company.

The evening was spent socially and at the close refreshments were served. The group presented the honoree with a gift of crystal.

AUXILIARY SESSION.

Members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Eagles club met last week at the Eagle hall for a routine meeting in charge of the vice president, Mrs. Earl Stutz. Victory prize during the social hour was presented to Mrs. Nellie Morrison. Plans were made to send Victory boxes to the Eagle men who are in service. The group will sponsor a rummage sale Aug. 15 at 17 East Sixth street. Mrs. Harry Emmons and Mrs. Earl Stutz will be in charge. The next meeting will be held Aug. 20 at 8 p. m. at the Eagles' hall. Plans were made for a picnic to be held at 6 p. m. tonight at South park. Members are to bring their own lunch and table service.

SCHUTTERA-DETER VOWS READ SUNDAY

Open Church Service Held At St. John's Evangelical and Reformed for Mansfield Girl and Soldier From Camp Gordon, Ga.

JOHN SCHUTTERA gave his daughter, Barbara Mae, in marriage Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock before the altar of the St. John's Evangelical and Reformed church. At that time she became Mrs. Herman Henry Deter in the presence of many relatives and friends.

The single ring service was read by Rev. Dr. P. H. Saleste for the bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Schuttera, 610 Sunset boulevard, and Sgt. Deter, son of Mrs. U. S. Deter, 971 South Market street, Galion.

Preceding the service, nuptial music, "I Love You Truly," "Liebesraum," "Indian Love Call," "Because," "At Dawning" and "O Promise Me," was played by Mrs. Helen Heston, organist. The altar was decorated with palms, ferns, two seven branch candelabra and beauty baskets of mixed fall flowers.

For her wedding Miss Schuttera wore a powder blue street length frock with bracelet length sleeves. Her accessories were in white and her only jewelry was a gold cross, a gift of the bridegroom. She wore a corsage of gardenias.

Miss Donna Mae Porter, a close friend, was maid of honor, wearing a gold street length frock and accessories trimmed in green. Her corsage was of Talisman roses. She wore a gold locket, a gift from the bride.

Mrs. Schuttera's ensemble was navy blue with white accessories. She wore a corsage of gardenias. Escorting the guests to their

CHAPTER XXI
"What's the matter with the guy? As if I don't know," said Adele. "Clare... It's always Clare... He never got over her... He wouldn't be the first man to leave a good wife for a bad woman. One of the barkeepers probably called her to come and get him. And Sue will put him to bed and tell the children that Daddy is ill and no one will ever hear a peep out of her about it. Luckily it's early. Else everybody would have seen him."

Meegan said, "I'll have to stop there. I'm not supposed to have seen him."
"And Sue will have a headache or Van will be very tired or the children won't be up to par and she and Van have decided not to go out tonight. The house and Sue will be perfect and she'll even ask you in to have a drink and she'll talk about everything under the sun except what Van is doing to her... tearing her insides out. She's in love with him. That's not all. She's still excited about him and she's never been sure of him because of Clare. Everything she's done to make his life smooth doesn't mean a thing. A man can admire a woman of a lot and still not be in love with you or want you."

Meegan closed her eyes briefly. "I'll be glad when this summer is over, Adele. It's been... abnormal."

Adele grinned. "Obnoxious is a better word. Here comes Charlie with our dinner..."

"I hate to run off as soon as I've eaten. But I don't know when I'll get to town again."

"Think nothing of it. I have a new book upstairs. On Saturday nights I stuff my ears so I won't hear all the noise down here and then wallow in gore."

The music had begun and the dining room was filling when Adele poured her coffee.

Meegan said, "Mother is coming later with the Andersons."

"And Toby?"

"I haven't seen him all day. I wish he'd bring a girl tonight. Mother so loves to sit on the sidelines and watch him." She put her napkin on the table. "I really must go, Adele. I told Erica 8 o'clock and it's after that. Why not drive up with me? There's plenty room."

It disturbed her to think of Adele absorbed in a gruesome story.

"Carl! Not tonight, thanks. I want to get at that book."

"It's been fun and the dinner was splendid."

"You're welcome. But run along and call me when you have time. I'm going to have more hot coffee..."

Meegan left her and walked quickly to the steps, meeting Clare and Fayne and several shadowy unfamiliar figures with them. She stepped back, herself a shadowy figure, because they were coming up the steps, Clare leading, Clare wearing some sort of shimmering dress beneath a short white jacket, Clare heedless of anyone who might want to pass her.

Meegan heard her say, "I suggested that we dine at home because the food isn't exceptional at the club."

A woman's voice answered, "I'm so glad we did, darling. I know it was ever so much better."

Fayne, his white jacket making him seem like a sudden light in the darkness, did not say anything. He did not see Meegan. No one saw her because she had stepped back where the veranda lights did not touch her but where she could see Clare and Fayne with the light full upon their faces. And such different faces, she thought. Faces with such different thoughts caught in an unguarded moment. Fayne, erect, distinguished, detached. And Clare, her eyes alive and seeking, seeking what and whom? She had everything... And Fayne looking at the people on the island and expected him to look and Clare looking as she had always looked with that indestructible beauty that made lesser mortals feel that they had always lived in her shadows and that only she had been born to light and grace and success.

When they passed and went into the club house, Meegan continued to stand for a few moments looking after them, feeling as if Clare had walked over her and crushed her leaving her to pick up the broken pieces of herself before walking in the direction of Erica's house. And once again Clare had done nothing to her. She had not even seen her. Let her body hurt as if Clare had rampled her. Perhaps it was not Clare at all but seeing Fayne again and remembering to what Fayne had reduced himself tonight. Still her body felt as bruised as her mind and as old as her heart.

Erica drove with the uncertainty of one who had not long been driving. She sat tensely, her small hands gripping the wheel, her small foot ever ready to apply the brakes. Hatless, her black hair blew away from her face revealing it thoughtful and infinitely appealing. Her admiration of Erica's looks, Meegan thought, was the natural one of a fair person for a dark one.

Erica said, "I don't talk much when I'm driving. I have to keep my mind on it. You'll have to tell me where you live."

"I'll tell you when we reach town. Isn't there anyone you want to see, anything you want to do while I'm at the apartment?"

Erica gave a negative nod. They were silent for several minutes before she said, "Helen and Roy have bought a farm not far from town. We'll be leaving the island after Labor day... Helen was raised on a farm."

"Is she pleased about it?"

Erica nodded affirmatively. "It's a big place with a big old house on it. They're having it all done over inside. But Helen doesn't think this summer has been a failure. She's like that... She's had a good time. Even if Roy'd lose his money, I don't think she'd mind very much. She could always remember and talk about the times when they had money and a house on the island and she had lots of clothes. She can take it one way or the other. The only time she worries is when something happens to us."

"You are very devoted to her," Meegan said.

"I wish I were like her. I wish I didn't wonder what people think of me. I wish I didn't care. Helen doesn't care. She'll tell you she bleaches her hair because Roy likes blondes. She'll tell you she wears bright colors because he likes them too. She doesn't care what anyone says or thinks about her as long as Roy thinks she's all right. And on the farm she'll work like one of the hired hands and love it."

"Are you going with them on the farm?"

"She could see big blond Helen happy on the farm, shouting as loudly as she pleased to the hired help and her children. I haven't told them yet. But I'm going back to work in the plant. I don't have to. Roy will always take care of me. But I want to. They need girls. I'll find a place of my own to live."

"And the experiment this summer has been a failure to you?"

After a few minutes Erica said, "I don't know the right things to say. Maybe I shouldn't say anything about Toby. Maybe that isn't done."

"I'd like to talk to you about Toby if you want to."

"I don't want to think of him in any way except the way he thinks of me. We've been experimenting to each other. He's your brother. Maybe you don't see him as I see him. I don't see him as a hero. But you can see a man's fault—they look you right in the eyes—and still love him... We're coming into town. You'll have to tell me which way."

"Up Charles street."

"Up Charles street... Down Charles street is where I came from. Down Charles street where, when you're married, you leave other men alone. Middle class morality. I guess you'd call it."

Meegan said quietly, "You mean Mrs. Christopher?"

"I didn't know her name but I've seen Toby there with her and riding by with her."

"Her name is Clare. We've known her all our lives."

"I don't care how long you've known her."

TOUGHEST MARINES FEEL NEED OF RELIGION WHEN UNDER FIRE

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO—"Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition" is more than a song to the fighting United States Marines. It is a way of living between raids.

A man's religion never appears more strongly than when he is under fire, according to Sgt. Leroy Rhoades, of Des Moines, Ia., who recently returned on furlough. His membership in the ground crew of the famous Marine Fighter Squadron, VMF 212 took him to almost every major battle front in the Pacific.

"The toughest leathernecks, grizzled old timers, knelt in prayer in tall grass and dug-outs at the side of the jungle," he recalled. "They weren't ashamed. They felt the need of a power greater than themselves. I know. I was one of them."

Sgt. Rhoades came home with a warm gratitude for the natives he encountered on various islands.

"They liked us because the Japanese had treated the island women like they do their own, and because they had forced the natives from their homes back into the hills," he said.

"They couldn't do enough for us. There was one Marine aviator who had been shot down and had been rescued by a tribe of natives. They nursed him back to health. When the Japanese arrived, the natives buried the flyer and sunk a bamboo pole down to him so he could breathe."

"Later, after the Japs left, the natives literally carried the flyer across the streams so he wouldn't get his feet wet on the way back to the base. Thirty natives escorted him as though he were a king."

But the story Sgt. Rhoades is fondest of telling is about a machine gunner who was sitting in inky-thick darkness when he heard noises near his dugout. He challenged the unseen visitors, and receiving no answer, opened fire.

Dawn came and revealed no less than 50 dead Japs piled up about 30 feet from his position.

"The machine gunner," grinned Sgt. Rhoades, "promptly passed out from shock."

WALLACE TO ENDORSE WORLD ORGANIZATION

Plans To Make Speech Urging Adoption of Senators' Post-War Program.

(By International News Service)
WASHINGTON — Vice President Henry A. Wallace, who returned today from a vacation trip in Iowa, plans to make a speech in the near future urging adoption of a resolution by the senate endorsing a post-war plan of world organization.

While the vice president declined to reveal his program for the near future, it was learned that he plans to accept one of several invitations to speak on post-war problems. The speech probably will be made in the mid-west.

Wallace is expected to give encouragement to senate advocates of the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill resolution which calls for establishment of a post-war policing organization to keep the peace.

While he may not endorse the resolution by name, he is expected to give support to that group in their coming fight to adoption of a strong resolution by the senate calling for a United Nations organization both to win the peace and to preserve it.

Wallace said that in his talk with people in Iowa he found about three-fourths glad to take different attitude than before in international problems.

The vice president said he could report complaints of Iowa's armers over rationing and machinery problems to Secretary of Agriculture Wickard.

"There is a shortage of labor," he said. "There also is a shortage of machinery. For example, they will have an allotment of 60 tractors and be able to get only 45. There is not nearly enough lumber, they are short on corn pickers and they need some copper wire."

"I did not try to give advice and will not here. I told them I could act as a reported and tell them I found."

Wallace said that land values advanced more from 1941 to 1943 than from 1913 to 1918 during world war I.

"If the same pattern is followed in the future there will be a big increase in land values than at present," he said. "A considerable part of the impetus comes from people in Chicago although most of the purchases thus far have been made by tenants."

3 GIRLS MISSING

Air Unseen Since Leaving Their Homes Sunday.

Mrs. Marie Lyons, 352 Springhill street, today asked police to locate her daughter, Betty, reported missing from home early Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Lyons said she believed her daughter was with Irene Lupe, 15, also reported missing.

The Lyons girl has light hair and is wearing a light-colored dress with a five feet, two inch tail and weighs 125 pounds. She is wearing a dark dress when she disappeared, she was told.

WAGNER INSISTS HE HASN'T BEEN ASKED FOR BILL

Solicitor Declines to Draw Up Depository Ordinance Till Council Instructs Him.

City council may run into another hitch in selecting a depository for city funds at a special meeting Tuesday night unless councilmen request legislation designating where the funds are to be held, City Solicitor Leslie K. Wagner said today.

Council is scheduled to convene in a committee session tomorrow night to work out a plan for setting up pay increases for city employees, but the depository question also is expected to be presented for final action.

The depository letting had been advertised for the monthly council meeting last Tuesday night when bids from two banks were opened, but no legislation was presented for approval.

Wagner, who prepared the ordinance, said he had not been requested by council to draw up the measure and he couldn't legally prepare the legislation until council tells him what to do.

The city has approximately $300,000 in active funds and $50,000 in inactive money to deposit for the next two years, the solicitor said.

The Farmers Savings and Trust company submitted a request to council for active funds, while the Mansfield Savings Trust National bank asked for both active and inactive funds, offering one-fourth of one per cent interest per year for the inactive money. Active funds don't draw interest.

ASHLAND MAN FOUND DEAD

Body of Retired Farmer, 82, Discovered In Cistern

By His Kin.

ASHLAND—Funeral services will be held at the Heyl funeral home at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday for A. O. Workman, 82, retired Milton township farmer, whose body was found in a cistern Sunday at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Zehner, three miles west of Ashland, with whom he had been residing for the past three years.

The body was found by his son-in-law and daughter when they returned home from church services. The cover over the cistern had been removed from the cistern top before the aged man had either plunged or fallen to his death.

Dr. H. T. Martin of Ashland, acting coroner, deferred the verdict until further investigation is made.

Officiating at the rites will be Rev. Harold E. Lentz, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church. Burial will be in Chestnut Grove cemetery, southwest of Ashland.

He is survived by two other daughters, Mrs. Vernon Doerfer of Ashland and Mrs. Clarence Rowland of Mansfield; four sisters, Mrs. Wes Stillwagon of Ashland, Mrs. Lou Riley of east of Ashland, Mrs. Daniel Kagey of Mansfield and Mrs. William Brindle of east of Mansfield, and a brother, George Workman of near Milford.

WEED GARDEN OF THE VICTORY

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(As VICTORY gardeners have learned this summer, there are weeds galore to contend with, but the wild morning glory is the gangster of them all. Unless kept under control from the very start of the gardening season, wild morning glory will prove to be a persistent pest which ultimately will make good gardening almost impossible. Unless rooted out every time it shows itself, the wild morning glory will stealthily creep over plants and tangle them together, finally strangling and starving them to death.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, this ruthless weed can be identified by its leaves, which are shaped somewhat like Indian arrow heads, and by its pale pink, white striped small morning glory shaped flower.

Every effort should be made to prevent the vines from reseeding themselves.

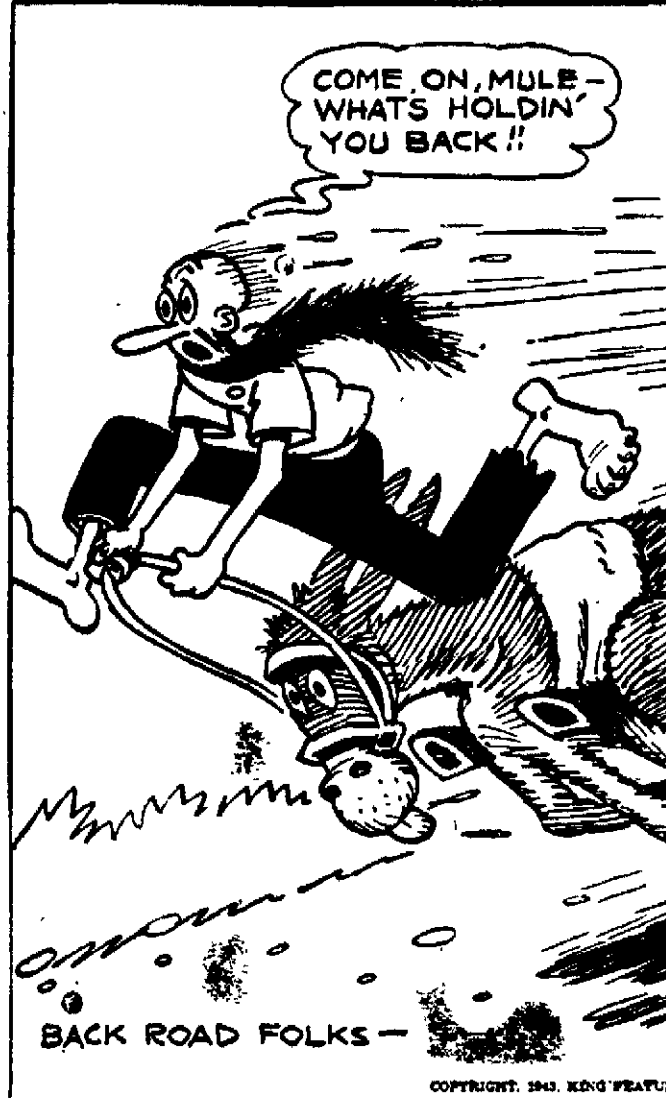

In campaigning against the wild morning glory, it is not enough to cut off or pull out the vine itself, for its roots grow and travel underground almost as much as the vine does above ground. The roots should be dug out or killed by liberal doses of caustic soda.

Salt is a convenient and safe weed killer in the vegetable garden. Pull out the weeds and apply salt or make a hot brine, using one pound of salt to a gallon of water. This strength brine will quickly kill off almost any type of weeds.

Where the vegetable plants are too close to the weeds to use salt, strips of burlap or roofing paper laid along the row will discourage weed growth.

CORRESPONDENTS 'DECORATE' HIM WITH (TYPEWRITER) RIBBON

(By United Press)

WITH A U. S. INVASION FORCE, July 27—(Delayed)—Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk, who commanded the American amphibious attack at Sicily, was "decorated" today with a strip of red and black typewriter ribbon, making him an honorary member of the Atlantic Fleet Correspondents' association.

Associated Press War Correspondent John Moroso, one of the association's charter members, pinned the ribbon on the admiral's shirt, explaining that the red stripe was significant of a typical correspondent's financial conditions, the black stripe of his probable future.

The brief ceremony was held on the bridge of Kirk's flagship. The association has seven correspondents and 22 honorary members including Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet, and several other high-ranking army and navy officers. Its membership card lists the following:

"Membership—Good for the duration (1) of the war, (2) of the correspondents and (3) of the recipient.

"Privileges—Recipient is entitled, by custom and precedent established by the Atlantic fleet correspondents, to enter, without apology: (A) All places, especially those with foot rails; (B) all disputes; (C) the admiral's barge. (x)

"Tenets—Member must have courage and the cheerful determination to blast the enemy to hell whether with gun, torpedo, bomb, plane or pen. It need only be added, further, that the beliefs of the AFCA cover all beliefs—including that of the right to argue about it.

(x) "The admiral willing."

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, August 10.

An auspicious time for establishing ways and means for the achievement of projects of major importance, according to lunar and mutual aspects. It should be a stimulating and expansive influence, with promise of operations of outstanding significance, in business or financial activities, yet there may be decidedly menacing situations also. There may be tricky and fraud, with shrewd contracts and agreements, which may bewilder and perplex. The judgments should be based on logic and sound principles and clear thinking rather than emotional or impulsive conduct. Surprising success should crown straight policies.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the eve of a year of excellent opportunity for attaining advanced goals both in business and in personal popularity and prestige. It should be a most encouraging and expansive opening, with honors, preferment, and public recognition for sound and worthy projects. But all may be negated by bad reasoning, want of sound policies and principles, and by entanglements of a debatable nature. Treachery, fraud and collusion, especially with papers or contracts might have sinister and sorrowful denouements. The mental grasp of situations is not wholly dependable. Be cautious and alert to schemes.

A child born on this day may have much talent and ambition, probably to shine in the public eye, but it may become entangled with questionable and suspicious associates.

NORMANDIE'S BIGGEST SHOW

Thousands of New Yorkers Watch as Giant Ship Nears Even Keel.

New Jersey side of the river, the palisades were black with people strung along a mile stretch.

As the Lafayette rose free of the bottom late yesterday, there were no cheers from the spectators. But there were smiles and handshaking among the navy and civilian personnel of the salvage crews. The 95 pumps set up by divers in a year and a half of salvage operations momentarily halted.

Today the delicate job of bringing the huge vessel to an upright position was resumed. She was up 44 feet at 8:15 a. m. and the interest of the public in the operations increased as the hours wore on. The raising of the "Normandie," as everybody was calling it, had become one of New York's biggest shows.

The navy announced that salvage operations on the $39,000,000 73,280-ton luxury liner already had cost slightly more than $3,050,000 and will cost another $750,000 before the hull is ready for refitting.

Ultimately, it is hoped, the huge ship will be pressed into active duty as an American troop transport.

DEATH CLAIMS ASHLAND WOMAN

M'ARTHUR SAYS JAPS USED BEST RESOURCE, LOST

Declares Pacific Victories Not Glamorous But Decisive In the End.

cesses in the campaign has been cumulative to the point of being vital.

"A measure of their potentiality can be obtained by imaging the picture to have been reversed, with the enemy capturing Guadalcanal and besieging Port Moresby, rather than we in possession of Munda and at the gates of Salamaua.

"Such a contrast would have meant defeat for us in the war for the Pacific."

General MacArthur's statement was coupled with a communique which told of a 63-ton bombing attack on enemy positions on Kolombangara island, about New Georgia in the central Solomon. Many hits were scored with one and two-thousand pound bombs on the Vila airfield and on nearby Kape harbor. No enemy planes were encountered.

The general also sent Admiral William F. Halsey, jr., chief of the South Pacific forces, a message saying tribute to the officers and men of a fleet task force which sank a Japanese cruiser and two destroyers and possibly three in Vella gulf, northwest of Kolombangara Friday night. The United States forces came through without loss.

U. S. 'Giant Killers' Sink 4 Jap Warships

By ART BURGESS

ABOARD THE FLAGSHIP OF A NAVAL TASK FORCE, Aug. 7—(Delayed)—A light American naval force of "Jack the Giant Killers" sank at least four Japanese warships today in one of the most daring attacks of the war.

The United States ships steamed right into the enemy's stronghold in Vella gulf in the Solomons and destroyed one cruiser and three destroyers. I was the only war correspondent aboard the flagship of the American task force.

(Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique of Aug. 8 said one cruiser and two destroyers were definitely sunk and the fourth vessel "probably so," in a battle which started shortly before midnight of Aug. 6. And, it added, we sustained no losses.)

I saw the Nipponese cruiser, a three stacker with an airplane hoist, explode soon after it was hit by torpedoes and shells from our ships in the waters northwest of famed Munda airfield on New Georgia island which is now in American hands.

The cruiser, standing broadside to us, first caught fire in her bow from torpedoes, and when our gun batteries opened up on her in a masterful naval tactical maneuver, I saw additional fire break out followed by a terrifying explosion.

The blast sent flames thousands of feet in the air, enabling me to take down notes as if under a hundred yard lamp. The fire—in sheets of yellow, orange and red—spread over the water, lighting up the channel from shore despite overcast weather.

Then a Japanese destroyer hovered into sight directly in front of the burning cruiser, making it stand out as a perfect target. It gave us a good idea, too, how big the cruiser was.

Call Munda Loss 'Readjustment'

NEW YORK—(AP)—The American capture of Munda in the Solomons was described today by the Tokyo radio as merely "readjustment" of Nipponese lines on New Georgia island.

As recorded by U. S. government monitors, the Tokyo broadcast, beamed to North America in English, said:

"The Japanese army and naval garrison forces in the Munda area on Aug. 6 readjusted the front line to the north of Munda and are continuing fighting against numerically superior enemy forces."

Navy Resorts To Corduroy Road To Beat Jungle Mud

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The navy reported recently that an old fashioned American corduroy road did something the best modern surfacing gadgets failed to do—made possible the movement of heavy equipment on Rendova island in the present offensive in the Central Solomons.

The mud on Rendova is so oozy and deep, the navy said, that it offered no base at all for steel mesh used to provide the roadway surface.

This was an alarming obstacle to the soldiers and marines who landed on the island June 30 to start offensive and somehow had to transport inland their artillery and heavy trucks loaded with supplies.

In their predicament the commanders of the landing force called on Commander H. Roy Whitaker of Tacony, Philadelphia, Pa., officer in charge of the seabee unit.

The seabees chopped down palm trees and built a roadway of 12 foot logs which made possible the passage of all the heavy equipment.

THEATERS

Words Win Out.

When two fast-talking, slick-working impresarios tangle in a knock-down, drag-out verbal battle to win the hand of the same fair lady, the action and comedy is bound to be hot and heavy. That's what happens in 20th Century-Fox's technicolor musical, "Coney Island," which stars Betty Grable, George Montgomery and Cesar Romero and is now showing at the Ohio. Betty plays the part of a cafe entertainer whose charms have Montgomery and Romero on a merry-go-round for her affections. The picture has the famous New York entertainment spot, Coney Island, as a background.

Yanks Ahoy.

Doubleday and Ames are back at the Madison. With Joe Sawyer and William Tracy in the top roles, "Yanks Ahoy" is another in the series of laughable army films featuring the antics of the two sergeants, Doubleday and Ames. This time the two are sent overseas and the trouble they get into on the voyage keeps the audience in a laugh. The two are "busted" when Doubleday is found in the sleeping room of the ship's nurse. Ames admits he conspired to get Doubleday into the "jam." Both redeem themselves when they recapture a two-man Jap sub. Co-attraction is "The Youngest Profession."

Plenty of Music.

Four of the nation's most famous swing bands are heard in Columbia's "Reveille With Beverly," musical comedy at the Park with lovely Ann Miller featured. The orchestras of Duke Ellington, Bob Crosby, Freddie Slack and Count Basie give out with the rhythm. The picture presents Miss Miller as the director of an early morning program, intended for the boys of the army. Based on the actual radio program "Reveille With Beverly," shows just how the program is put on. Co-attraction is "I Escaped From the Gestapo."

STOCKS STEADY DURING EARLY MARKET TRADE

Little Hope Seen For Easing of Situation For Civilian Steel Production.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Stocks were generally steady in today's early market dealings. A few leaders registered fractional gains on substantial opening trades.

Southern Pacific started 1/2 point higher on an initial transaction of 1,000 shares. Goodrich, American Telephone and Chrysler showed minor gains.

Commenting on the revision of steel mill schedules under the war production board's campaign to distribute metal more equitably, the magazine Steel said:

"This is not releasing more steel for civilian use and heavy bookings well into next year indicate there will be no early easing for this purpose."

CHICAGO—(AP)—Grains turned weak at the opening today. Hedging appeared in wheat and there was some liquidation of oats and rye as increased amounts of corn were moving to market.

Wheat started 1/4-1/2 lower. September $1.44 1/2-1/4. December $1.46 1/2-1/4. Rye was 1/4-1/2 lower. September $1.01 1/2-1/4.

Grain Market

CHICAGO—(AP)—Open today Wheat Sept. $1.44 1/2-1/4. Dec. $1.46 1/2-1/4. Oats: Sept. 70c. Dec. 60c. Rye: Sept. $1.01 1/2-1/4. Dec. $1.03 1/2-1/4.

LONDON—(By Wire)—Undoubtedly it is a good democratic rule of censorship that encourages the reporting of the achievements of enlisted men and junior officers but severely restricts the mention of anyone from colonel up. The rule prevents publicity-grabbing and thus strengthens morale. Yet it prevents recognition of the work being done by middle-aged officers who are voluntarily making a great personal sacrifice of comfort and income, and also risking their lives.

For instance a tank colonel fighting his way across Sicily with the Seventh Army must remain anonymous. He has the Purple Heart for a bad wound received in the last war. A prosperous patent lawyer in Washington, he made a fight to get back in the service, landed in West Africa in November, and now has been fighting his way through Sicily. His outfit had the only serious shooting that occurred on the way into Palermo. He is only one of many such men you will find in the field in Sicily.

Clapper

It is too bad that although correspondents can give elaborate descriptions of General Patton's pearl-handled pistols they can not mention these graying men who are serving day after day in the field when they could have stayed home in easy comfort.

Several of our generals are also compelled to remain completely anonymous, although taking the same risks as the junior officers and the enlisted men, plus far heavier responsibility.

One general went on the Rome bombing raid as a part of his routine practice of making frequent

FAIR ENOUGH--

NEW YORK—When I was out west last spring I promised to cite some specific instances of drunkenness, shirking, insubordination and other misconduct by civilian sailors of the merchant marine, serving on board the same ships with young enlisted sailors and commissioned officers of the armed guard, or gun crews of the navy and at much higher rates of pay, by way of refuting the propaganda of the Communists, who have enjoyed the favor of Mrs. Roosevelt, Ma Perkins and the War Shipping administration, and who would have you believe such things could not be.

Well, after I got back, I had a lot of accumulated correspondence to read and answer and documents to study and considerable leg work laid for me, so I have just got around to it.

Not to disappoint you, here is Case No. 1, that of an oiler whose ship was in a foreign port discharging cargo and under orders to be ready to sail in a few hours. Therefore there was no liberty and therefore the oiler told the captain he would go ashore and come back any goddam time he felt like it, and the captain could log him if he wanted to, because it would all be canceled by the shipping administration when he got back. He also harangued the rest of the crew not to worry about logging because all charges would be wiped out. So the skipper did log him and he was duly tried on a charge of misconduct and using profane language to the master and chief engineer. And, sure enough, the complaint was dismissed.

Case No. 2 is a messman who went ashore without permission in the first port on a voyage, got drunk and was absent three days. A few days after the ship sailed he developed a venereal disease and was off watch for eight days. At the next port again he went ashore without permission and returned drunk and the same thing happened twice more in the next port. He was put in a hospital there but left without being discharged and the ship finally sailed without him and he was logged as a deserter.

Case No. 3 is another messman. He assaulted the chief officer with a knife, was arrested and got six weeks in jail in a foreign port. The master reported that he was indifferent to discipline, and drunk and absent over leave.

ON BROADWAY--

By Dorothy Kilgallen

(Note: Lucy Monroe is one of the nation's favorite larks. Here, hitting the typewriter instead of a high C, she tells you about a new American pastime.—D. K.)

Lucy Monroe says:

MY FRIENDS tell me I'm a pretty positive person. I like to approach problems and facts head-on, without qualifying or rationalizing or dithering about. But to me, as it must to all women, has come the urge to knock a few far-fetched notions into a cocked hat, and to sing out with resounding NO's.

First of all, a very big NO—"The Star Spangled Banner" is NOT the sole musical item in my repertoire. It's true that I love our beautiful national anthem more than any other song, but my list of "And Then I Sang" is a long one. It's true, too, that I have been so closely associated with the singing of the Francis Scott Key immortal that they've dubbed me "The Star-Spangled Soprano" and I'm mighty proud of the title. But since August 4, 1941, when I was called upon to lead the first of a long series of community sings, I've guided millions of community sing-loving Americans through such favorites as "The Caissons Go Rolling Along," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," and—hold tight!—"The Man On the Flying Trapeze!"

But I'm going right back to "The Star Spangled Banner" for the second NO—and here it is. I maintain the "The Star Spangled Banner" is NOT too difficult a song for the nation's non-musical millions to sing. I'd be the last to deny that its range of notes runs a few more than is usual in a popular song, or that the music is tricky. But certainly our forefathers didn't have an easy time building our country. They suffered great hardships in cutting their way through the wilderness, beating off hostile forces, molding a bright new land. Is it too much to ask of Mr. John Q. American if, in honoring their memory and the land they built, he has to stretch his larynx a wee bit?

It is NOT, say I. And furthermore, the vocal

REVOLUTIONIZES PRODUCTION OF GUN BARRELS

Timken Turns Out More In Month Than England Did Since Start of War.

(By United Press)

CANTON—Officials of the Timken Roller Bearing company here today revealed a method of production which turns out more heavy gun barrels a month than the combined total of English factories during the war up to April 17, 1942.

The disclosure was made in a statement approved by military authorities and confirmed remarks made by Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of army service forces, in a speech at Harrison, N. J.

The almost incredible speed-up in the production of 75 and 40 millimeter gun tubes—6,000 a month—is possible through use of seamless steel tubing and a secret process closely guarded, Timken officials said.

Three hundred gun barrels a month was considered the limit even for large shops when the barrels were made by the standard forging process. The forging method required rifling the bore, machining and remelting the abundant scrap forging makes.

The Timken process involves upsetting the breech end from seamless steel tubing rolled to the diameter of the barrel, rather than machining, casting or forging it from a steel bar cut to the diameter of the breech.

The seamless tubes were developed over an 18-year period by the company as a substitute for bar stock in the manufacture of machine parts for automobiles and airplanes.

In his speech before 8,000 munitions workers at Harrison, N. J., Gen. Somervell said:

"We have developed a new way of making gun barrels. Within a few weeks, one single American factory using this new process will be turning out each month more heavy gun barrels than all the factories of England turned out in the whole war."

The Timken company, one of the world's largest producers of the tubing is turning out barrels for gun airplanes and ships just as before the war the company made thousands of seamless tubes in its factories here.

WOMAN INJURED

Suffers Head Wounds as Car Hits Another, Is Ditched.

Mrs. Thomas D. Graham, Bellville R. D. 2, suffered a head injury last evening when the car in which she was riding sideswiped another automobile and landed in a ditch on U. S. Route 42, one mile south of Mansfield. She was treated at Mansfield General hospital.

Drivers of the two cars, Mrs. Graham's husband, and Carolyn M. Stethelton, Cook road, escaped injury.

According to state patrolmen, the cars sideswiped when Graham attempted to pass Miss Stethelton. Graham was arrested on a charge of driving an automobile with inadequate brakes. He is to appear in Mansfield municipal court Tuesday morning.

MATERNITY AID MAKES HEADWAY

Plan Appears Certain To Be Adopted In Ohio as OMA Drops Protest.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—Ohio's adoption of a federal emergency maternity aid plan for wives of servicemen appeared certain today as the Ohio Medical association, blaming "political" interference for the failure of an alternative plan, gave Health Director R. H. Markwith a free hand to work out details with Washington.

Thus the only hurdle left before the plan is established in Ohio appeared to be acceptance by the federal children's bureau of a revised plan on which Dr. Markwith conferred with representatives of the bureau here last week.

The OMA executive council advised Markwith that "pressure from Washington" had been exerted upon heads of private army and navy relief agencies with which the OMA had hoped to work out an alternative private aid program, making it necessary for those organizations "to take a hands-off attitude."

Markwith had held up adoption of an earlier plan for Ohio's participation in the $4,400,000 federal program, when it met objection both from Dr. Edwin F. Daily health director of the children's bureau, and from the OMA.

"The council . . . has no additional recommendation as to what course the state of Ohio should pursue on this matter," Dr. C. C. Shurburn, president of the OMA, wrote Markwith. But he added: "We disagree with the principle on which the proposal (of the federal children's bureau) is based. We still feel that the program is based on an unsound social philosophy which develops regimentation and tends to produce a poor quality of service."

BRIDGES CRACKS BACK AT REDS

Declares U. S. Regrets Soviet Hasn't Opened Second Front Against Japs.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Sen. H. Styles Bridges (R) N. H., today branded as "unfortunate and unjustified" Russian criticism of failure of the United States and Great Britain to establish a second front in western Europe.

Bridges tartly retorted that the United States regrets that Russia has failed to establish a second front in the hard war against Japan but has refrained from attacking the Soviet for not doing so.

"Russia has been openly dealing with the Japanese, exchanging supplies and war materials," he said. "I am informed that Russia got rubber, oil and strategic materials from Japan and has given Japan fishing permits valuable both for food and as a given observation purposes and iron ore to Japan."

"Russia has refused to give us some air bases in our war to the death with Japan, but we have made no attack on her, and it seems to me it becomes time to rock the boat now when the war is going well."

High officials in Washington generally are expressing both surprise and regret at the statement in Pravda, official Communist organ in Moscow, accusing the United States and Britain of having failed to keep promises to establish a second front in western Europe.

Since the statement amounts to a direct accusation of broken promises by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, it is considered possible that a reply may be officially made in the near future.

LIQUOR MAKERS JOIN FIGHT ON PRICE GOUGING

Back OPA Effort To Roll Back Exorbitant Drink Costs; Ohio Outlook Better.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Alarmed over increasing prohibition sentiments, the liquor industry prepared to align itself with the office of price administration in the agency's attempt to roll-back exorbitant liquor prices.

Industry representatives, it was said, are greatly worried by the outbreak of bootlegging and illicit liquor traffic, fearing a resurgence of prohibition if normal trade practices are not restored and the consumer protected against price "gouging."

The conference of alcoholic beverage industries, a group representing the nation's big distilleries, is preparing a campaign to advertise OPA's new price regulations and instruct consumers to "pay no more."

OPA hopefully issued the first of its long-awaited regulations today, establishing mark-ups to be used by wholesalers and retailers throughout the nation in figuring their prices. The new procedure will go into effect Aug. 29.

Full effects of the new regulation should be apparent by about Oct. 1, bringing a "substantial reduction" in cases where liquor prices have risen to unwarrantably high levels through evasion of previous ceilings.

Ohioans Given Hope For More Liquor

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Ohioans were given hope today for more liquor.

The Office of Price Administration fixed markups for wholesalers and retailers in non-monopoly states, effective Aug. 29, and predicted "an average lowering" of the retail price of spirituous beverages.

While the new regulation will not apply directly to Ohio, this being a monopoly state, it may mean more liquor for Ohioans," said an official of the state department of liquor control, who declined to be quoted by name.

The OPA said that in some instances liquor prices had risen "to unwarranted high levels," either through "misunderstanding or through evasion and violation" of price controls.

"Enforcement of this regulation by the OPA," said the Ohio official, "should make a lot of merchandise available to Ohio, and other monopoly states that we were unable to touch before. Naturally distributors and agents have been unwilling to sell to Ohio if they could get $10 to $15 a case more elsewhere."

YANKS SPRING BOLD TRAP ON FOE IN SICILY

Land Behind Nazis, Cutting Off Reinforcements, Take 300 Axis Prisoners.

Observers believed the Axis would fall back to a new defense line north of Mount Etna, stretching from Taormina on the east coast to Santa Agata on the north coast. Capture of Santa Agata by Gen. Patton's troops now will force the enemy to choose an anchor base much closer to Messina, possibly Naso, nine miles northeast of Santa Agata.

Capture of Acireale brings Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's forces to a point ten miles from the village of Giarre—halfway to Taormina. Other Eighth army troops, by the capture of Maria di Gioria, now are 18 miles northwest of Catania on the railway ringing Mount Etna.

The town of Cesaro, captured yesterday by the U. S. Seventh army, is less than ten miles northeast of Troina. The main road down from the north coast passes through Cesaro, from which another road runs southwest of landazzo.

The British Eighth army's capture of Bronte, Adrano, Biscanville and Belpasso, vital links in the fortified chain around Mount Etna, undermined the enemy's defenses and precipitated a large-scale northward withdrawal.

Front dispatches said the Nazis were attempting to slowly disengage themselves along the entire British-held front. American pilots told of huge Axis truck convoys moving rapidly out of Randazzo, only five miles northwest of Mount Etna on the rail line skirting the mountain's base. Long lines of shovels jammed the roads far to the north, creating tangled traffic jams at many principal junctions, the airmen said.

While waves of Allied planes raved intense Axis ground fire in long sorties against Randazzo, American and British warships unbarbed enemy defenses on the north and east coasts of Sicily in a campaign to cut off the escape routes in the northeastern peninsula.

Axis shipping in the Straits of Messina, beaches along the coast of the enemy-held bridgehead and escape routes from the west and south were pounded mercilessly by Allied warplanes that vectored more than 50 missions designed to prevent a successful Axis evacuation from the doomed island.

The enemy's apparent decision to pull out of Randazzo, and thus the Mount Etna line, was prompted by the ever-increasing threat at the British Eighth army and the U. S. Seventh army would make a juncture and trap the Nazis before they could consolidate positions north of the volcano.

Milan, Turin, Genoa Steel Bombs' Impact

LONDON—(AP)—Large areas of Milan, Turin and Genoa—cities it contain two-thirds of Italy's industry—were reported in flames today under the hammer of British-based Lancasters of the R. F. which blasted all three Saturday night.

The triple attack was the saviest since Italy was warned more than a week ago by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower that the Allied air assault would be resumed and intensified because of Premier Pietro Badoglio's resistance to peace moves.

The weather was good and the ministry said "well concentrated" attacks were carried out on war factories at Milan and Genoa and on shipping facilities at Genoa.

The Italian high command said Rome broadcast that "damage is considerable," mainly in the industrial quarters of Milan and Genoa. The Fiat airplane and engine works and the Italian Royal arsenal are located at Turin.

The Irish clergymen were quoted as reporting "a great air of excitement" in Rome.

Report Nazis Fear Multiple Invasion

BERN, Switzerland—(AP)—Berlin dispatches said today German fears of a multiple allied invasion and recognition of the Allied determination to carry the war to a decisive end had prompted the recent urgent meetings between Nazi party and army leaders.

The Berlin correspondent of the Basler Nachrichten wrote that Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels told the conferees the Allies planned "to force Germany to her knees by a massive general thrust from all sides."

The Basler Nachrichten correspondent said that Nazi hopes of ending the war by a favorable compromise had been dashed by the failure of Premier Pietro Badoglio to gain an acceptable Italian armistice.

AN AMERICAN Two-Gun Story

THEY are 40 millimeter anti-aircraft cannons; produced in quantity for the first time in the U.S.A. by Chrysler Corporation, and installed on fighting ships, on shore defenses, and going with the armies into action on land.

We saw the gun for the first time at the Frankford Arsenal on January 4, 1941. It had never been made in large quantities. Its drawings and specifications were not designed for volume manufacturing methods. Our first step toward making them in large numbers determined the tools and equipment that would be required for large quantity production.

A study of the gun by our planning and purchasing specialists indicated that the making of more than half the parts could be subcontracted to other companies. We began at once to place orders with some 1836 subcontractors, located in 281 towns in 30 states.

On June 20, 1941, we were authorized to set up to build the gun in two types—water-cooled, twin mounted guns for the Navy, and air-cooled, mobile mounted guns with single barrels for the Army.

The two test guns on which we had been working were now completed. Within ten days they were tested by the U.S. Army Ordnance Department and approved.

Plymouth, Dodge, DeSoto and Chrysler plants were given their assignments to manufacture certain parts of the guns that were best suited to their facilities.

As gun production got under way the experience gained in years of car and truck production, and the cooperation of Army and Navy engineers aided us in developing manufacturing short-cuts which saved much time, material and use of machine tools.

One part formerly machined from solid brass was changed to a combination of steel and bronze, saving 50,000 pounds of precious brass per month.

We formed the gunsight plate from powdered metal. This was faster, saving not only machine time but material, too.

We made the flash-hider from a plain steel tube instead of a solid forging, saving greatly in time and over 50% of the material.

Gun barrel drilling time was cut in half, and rifle grooving was reduced from six hours to forty-five minutes. Many other time and material saving short-cuts were worked out as gun production moved ahead.

The care and precision with which each part is made enables us to put the guns together in one-thirtieth the time required before we applied quantity production methods.

From the South Pacific came a thrilling action story, reported by the Incentive Division, U.S. Navy. A fine American battleship, under the command of Captain Thomas Leigh Gatch, in 30 minutes of swift, deadly action, destroyed 32 Jap torpedo planes—many with 40 mm. anti-aircraft guns.

U. S. Navy to build a pair of test guns at once. As work on these first two guns advanced, our technicians and production specialists continued their efforts toward simplification of construction and assembly, and was to re-dimension every part to meet our volume production requirements.

To help speed this work, one of the guns was promptly shipped to us at Detroit with the existing drawings and specifications for its more than 1500 parts. When the gun arrived it was taken apart and studied piece by piece to determine how each part could best be made. At the same time our engineers and draftsmen began the new drawings and specifications for all the parts.

On February 3, came an order from the

As gun production got under way the experience gained in years of car and truck production, and the cooperation of Army and Navy engineers aided us in developing manufacturing short-cuts which saved much time, material and use of machine tools.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, AUGUST 9, 1943.

There are times, in all probability, when Hitler realizes that, after all, he is merely one of the Schicklgruber boys.

With peaches around $10 a bushel, and other fruit proportionately high, canning instructions appear rather academic.

Feeling of high responsibility to safeguard the rights of minorities should not be permitted to obscure the fact that the majority is also entitled to some consideration.

Inspect Sources of Meat Supply

STUDY of procedure in Canton may provide a formula for quick action to assure more sanitary handling of meat coming into Mansfield markets.

It is announced by the war meat committee of the Stark county farm war board that 13 temporary slaughter permits for county operators have been canceled because their holders failed to qualify for permanent permits.

Among unsatisfactory circumstances cited as causes of cancellation were failure to meet requirements such as: a screened, weather-tight, concrete-floored building with running water; refrigeration available, and preservation of fats, bones and other by-products.

It is stated that in the Stark county cities of Canton, Massillon and Alliance legal carcasses bear the slaughterers' city inspection number on the front and hind quarters, and his federal permit number.

Whether the output of meat is a large-scale operation, or that of an individual farmer, the requirement for cleanliness seems equally important, and it also appears that residents of more populous counties and cities are entitled to no greater protection from local, state and federal authorities than are the people of smaller counties, cities and towns.

Conditions reported by Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, as existing in some slaughter houses and retail meat outlets in Mansfield and Richland county, indicate a laxity that has been endangering the health of people in this community. There should be no further delay on the part of responsible officials in correcting these conditions, however drastic the necessary action may be.

No Primaries Tomorrow, Remember?

LEST it might otherwise escape notice, it may bear mentioning that tomorrow would be the day—under ordinary conditions—for holding primaries in Mansfield, to nominate candidates for city offices.

Polling places would be open in all precincts, with clerks and judges on duty, and a lot of time frittered away and considerable expense incurred, without any good reason.

Primaries are made unnecessary this year by the fact that no contests were presented on either party ticket and whatever interest there may be in selection of city officials will be concentrated in the November election.

Just now public attention seems more keenly directed toward Sicily, Italy, Russia and the Solomon Islands than toward local or national politics.

Bovingdon 'Only the Beginning'

DISMISSAL of John Bovingdon, the widely publicized "ballet dancer", from his $5,600 a year job as economic analyst in the Office of Economic Warfare, came only as a result of public reaction to the idea of handing out government posts to persons whose records disclose a strong element of crackpotism.

In the case of Bovingdon it required nothing more than reproduction of a photograph of him, poised in one of his "physical culture therapy" dances, to justify "crank" rating, despite his Harvard and Columbia degrees.

Just why the Bovingdon case caused such a furore, however, is a mystery to Representative Robert Ramspeck's civil service committee, which claims to have in its files a score of "more sensational" cases.

While the Bovingdon incident is termed "a storm in a teacup", unbiased observers express the opinion that a real clean-up job can be done when investigators stop centering their fire on isolated cases of fan dancers, movie stars, physical culture exponents and persons "who once spoke at Communist rallies", and devote themselves to wholesale weeding out of less spectacular but far more numerous persons who are not fitted by training, experience or temperament for government jobs in which they have been placed.

Under the New Deal administrations many of the government bureaus have been loaded down with theorists, reformers and visionaries, and it is well past "high time" for a more drastic weeding out than has thus far been deemed courteous to the dictator of such appointments.

Speculation In Real Estate

REAL ESTATE prices continue rising. Carl F. Distelhorst of the United States Savings and Loan League explains it as follows:

"Currently higher prices for residential properties reflect the cheaper dollar, and further depreciation in that dollar will spell even higher prices." Meaning, in simple terms, that people have to pay more money for property now, because they have the money. Bigger incomes and higher real estate values go together.

High prices naturally tempt many people to sell property, which is all right, if they would rather have the money than the real estate. But they should not let themselves be fooled about such things. The upward trend in property prices is much like the upward trend in living costs generally. There was a good deal of inflation of this kind caused by the last war. Prices soared for a while; then came a slump, which has lasted until recently.

It is wise, on general principles, not to get excited about this realty trend and start an inflationary boom. Some smart people make money in such times, but many who think they are smart lose in the long run. It is generally wise to buy a home to live in, when reasonably priced, but not wise for inexperienced people to start speculating in real estate.

Neutral nations in Europe have been warned against "giving asylum" to war guilty gangsters who attempt to flee from Axis countries—and it's probably too late for an asylum to do Hitler any good.

Some of those coffee substitutes seem to taste better—now that you can take them or leave them.

Help From Other Issues Needed By Unions to Win In Elections

By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON — It may be that there is terror in the hearts of those members of the house and senate who have gone home, having voted to override the president's veto of the Smith-Connally anti-strike bill. The threat of President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, to beat every one of them in the next election may have had that effect.

But there is no evidence of terror among those who have not left Washington, and secretaries of those who have gone home are inclined to smile at the threat.

As a matter of fact many of them will be beaten, but most of them would have been beaten anyway, in the view of political observers who have been studying the trend, and studying the reactions of the folks back home to the goings on in Washington.

Conviction of most observers has been for years, and certainly has not changed recently, that national labor union leaders can no more control the votes of their union members than cabinet members can, and cabinet members have been notoriously weak in this direction.

DESPITE claims to the contrary there is no really clear-cut case where labor union opposition beat a man in an important election, though there have of course been any number of cases where the man to whom union opposition was voiced was beaten. Generally, however, in each case there seem to political observers to have been a myriad reasons, some of which loomed far more significantly as the cause of defeat.

The theory of some students of this situation has nothing to do with the merits of any particular labor controversy. It is merely that the members of any given union in any given community vote for or against candidates for office according to their own whim, prejudices, convictions or whatnot, and do not bother at all about the requests, directions or orders they receive from their union officials.

One of the favorite claims of political accomplishments by labor is what happened to the senators who voted to confirm Judge Parker for the supreme court. There is no space for analysis of each of those many cases in less than a book, but a glance over the list will leave any open-minded investigator very skeptical indeed, especially if one first eliminates those senators who voted for Parker but died before they came up for reelection.

THE POLITICAL casualty list was very high right after that vote, because it occurred in the Herbert Hoover administration, which had carried the country by a Republican landslide, and was followed by a political swing just as violent in the other direction beginning with 1930 and continuing in the Roosevelt years.

One of the classic claims of union labor as being efficient in beating its enemies at the polls is the case of Senator Alice M. Swann, of Ohio, who was defeated in 1922. The union leaders claimed the credit for his defeat. But it so happened that the Anti-Saloon League also fought tooth and nail against Pomerene.

This seems more significant when one finds that just two years before this, Ohio had approved, by a majority of more than a quarter of a million, the Crabbe act, denounced by the Wets as the most obnoxious search and seizure dry enforcement act in the history of the wet and dry struggle. The majority against Pomerene was small.

In 1940 a study of the coal mining districts does not reveal that the appeal of John L. Lewis for the miners to vote against Roosevelt caused those districts to be much out of line with the rest of the country.

One Man's Opinion

By WALTER KIERMAN

WEL met up with a fellow yesterday who is rich beyond dreams.

He not only owns two alarm clocks but his wife recently inherited a dozen safety pins.

"What's a couple of old alarm clocks?" he says modestly. "A couple of years ago everybody had alarm clocks. They were as common as rubber bands. I also got three rubber bands put away in my safety deposit box."

What's a couple of old alarm clocks indeed!

Right at the beginning of the war and coincident with the drive to get everybody to work every day and on time, they banned the making of alarm clocks.

The man who signed the order is believed to be the same professor who later went on to win fame as the author of the ruling which prohibited the slicing of bread by machine.

He now is awaiting results of the safety pin ban. The first time he sees a baby with diapers sewed on he'll know he has succeeded again.

Thought for the day: The people aren't complacent, they just haven't got alarm clocks to waken them.

Editor's Note — Dear Walter: Surely you must also have noticed that just when somebody made a plea to save tin cans (with tops and bottoms cut out, so as to flatten) somebody else had 'em stop making can openers—so what?

New Policy of State Department Would Bar Palestine Discussion

WASHINGTON—It hasn't leaked out yet, but ex-Secretary of War Pat Hurley and the state department have got themselves into the middle of a hot debate over Palestine and the Jews which has got Zionist leaders very much upset.

The debate concerns a proposed statement to be issued by the U. S. and British governments barring any further discussion now of Jewish settlement in their ancient home, Palestine.

Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Minister Eden have been against barring further discussion of the Palestinian question, but the state department has been pushing them vigorously.

The question arose following the visit of Pat Hurley, now a Major General, to Arabia where he called on the famous Arab chieftain, Ibn Saud.

Ibn Saud, now recognized as the most powerful of all Arabs, gave Hurley some strong words against the Jews in Palestine, saying he was determined to drive them from all Arab lands. Hurley reported that he had told Ibn Saud diplomatically that he was in agreement.

New Policy.

FOLLOWING this, and after Hurley's return to this country, the state department prepared a new policy for the approval of the White House and the British government. The policy would bar any further discussion of Palestine and the Jews until after the war.

Those in the state department who prepared and pushed this new policy are:

1. Wallace Murray, Hull's political adviser on the Near East who also has been an ardent champion of the King of Italy and future Italian ruler by the House of Savoy.
2. Adolf Berle, assistant secretary of state and an original Brain Trustster, who began some time ago to "build up" a series of buffer states in Hungary and Poland against Russia.
3. Harold Hoskins, former chief detective and investigator for Berle, now in the army, who was raised in Syria, where his father was an official in the Syrian Protestant college, Beirut, and a great expert on the Arabic language.

When in the state department, Hoskins, an admirer of the Arab, was sent by Berle to Capitol Hill to interview congressmen who had signed the Zionist petition for a Jewish army.

This new state department policy, when sent to London, at first got a rebuff from Churchill and Eden. Following pressure from Washington, however, they finally yielded.

Plan Spreads Alarm.

MEANWHILE, news of this maneuvering leaked out and alarmed some of the president's close advisers, including Judge Sam Rosenman and Bernie Baruch. While many of them do not necessarily believe in Jewish settlement in Palestine, they do emphatically believe that the door should not be closed to discussion of the question, just as they believe it is important and healthy for all peace problems to be discussed.

As a result of state department activities, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise came to see the president several days ago. When he entered the executive office, the state department's proposed policy was lying on the president's desk awaiting his approval.

Rabbi Wise persuaded Roosevelt to postpone decision for a while, and the matter is still in abeyance. Meanwhile, the state department has been trying to get Secretary of War Stimson to go along with Hull. Stimson, however, has replied that he favored a frank discussion of the entire problem, and so far has not yielded.

Note: Hard-hitting Senator Langer of North Dakota has served notice that if the state department puts through its plan to stifle discussion of the Palestine situation, he will demand an investigation. "The Jewish people," Senator Langer says, "have suffered tremendous hardship in Germany and have a right to migrate to Palestine."

Here's Story About a Man and a Dog, Also Wind-Up of Series on the Navy.

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY—(By Wireless)—Before closing this series about the navy I want to tell you of one member of our ship's crew who didn't make the invasion trip with us. She was the ship's dog, and this is the story of her and her master.

He is a regular navy man, a chief petty officer of many years' service. He is tattooed, windburned, a bachelor, and quietly profane. His officers say he is an excellent worker. I'm not giving his name because the story concerns his getting drunk.

It seems that several months ago some sailors from our ship picked up a German shepherd puppy. She belonged to the whole crew, but the puppy took to our friend and he took to it, and sort of by acclamation she became recognized as his dog.

The puppy grew into a beautiful dog, smart, alert and sweet. But when hot weather came along she got the mange. Our friend doctored it with everything he could find, and other sailors helped him with the doctoring, but still the mange got worse. They finally clipped her hair close so they could get medicine to her skin more thoroughly, but nothing did any good.

When they hit the last port before leaving Africa my friend told me he went ashore and searched the country for a French or American army veterinary, but couldn't find any.

WHEN I came aboard ship this beautiful dog was frisky and alert, but the sailors had given up all hope of curing her. Something had to be done. The other sailors left it up to our friend. Whatever he chose to do had their approval. He told me later that you couldn't just put her ashore, for she had grown up aboard ship and wouldn't know how to take care of herself on land.

So our friend solved it in his own way, the morning after I came aboard. He didn't ask anybody to help him, or tell anybody what he was going to do. He just tied a weight around her neck and let her down into the water. That was her end—in the tradition of the sea.

I heard about it a few hours later, and stopped by the rail to tell our friend I was sorry. He told me "Let's go below and have a cup of coffee."

A few hours after that I saw that he had started having something else.

In the mid-afternoon I saw one of the ship's officers talking to him very seriously. It didn't look too good. Drunkenly aboard ship just doesn't go. The next day our friend was called before the mast and given a light suspension of privileges.

At lunch the boys were kidding him about it and he said, well, he wasn't sore about it, for obviously they had to do something to him.

That evening I happened to be sitting with the officer who had sentenced our friend, and just to make conversation I mentioned that it was sad about the dog being gone. He sat up and said, "What?"

I said yes, the dog was gone. He said, "My God!" And then he said:

"He's one of the best men on the ship, and I knew something was wrong, but I tried for half an hour to get it out of him and he wouldn't tell me."

The officer sat there looking as though he was sick, and again he said, "So that was it! My God!"

BY THE END of the first week after the Sicilian invasion there was almost no indication of warfare along our beach front. The German radio told us every night that we were getting bombed, but actually a stultifying peace had settled over us.

Hour by hour we could feel the ship slide back into her normal way. The watches were dropped down to "Condition Three," which is almost the peacetime regime. The ship's laundry reopened for the first time in weeks. Movies were borrowed and shown after supper. The wearing of white hats became optional once more. The men went swimming over the side, and fished with rod and reel from the forecastle head. The captain had time on his hands and played gin rummy with me when I got worn out with writing. Finally liberty parties were let ashore for sightseeing.

I knew then that the war, for our little family in this special phase, was over. So I shouldered my barracks bag and trundled myself ashore in Sicily for good.

These few weeks with the navy were grand, and I hated to part from the friends I had made. Too, this taste of civilized living had been a strange delight, and yet for some perverse reason I seemed to look forward to going back to the old soldier's way of sleeping on the ground and not washing before breakfast and fighting off fleas. Man's a funny creature.
